CONTEXT

Concert tickets range from ₹4,000 to ₹10,000.

Gen Z, early-career buyers could not pay it in one go.

Objectives

01 Help Gen Z afford premium concerts

02 Make booking easy

03 Fill the unsold middle tiers

Questions I started with

Why do we need this?

How will it help users and the business?

Will a Slice integration help?

What I observed

- Smaller sites use third-party split-pay
- BNPL label at checkout: 2 to 3 users
- Close to half of inventory sat unsold
- Gold and the middle tiers are the real problem

DEMAND BY TIER

Bronze	Sells out
Silver	Sells out
Gold	Stalls
Diamond	Stalls
VIP	Sells out

Gold and the middle tiers stall. The rest sell.

The decision

Any split: 25%, 23% or 27%

Or a fixed amount, like ₹2,000

No fixed presets. That is the USP.

How do you want to pay?

Business impact

Expected chain · step 1 of 5

01

Paid part by part

One big payment
becomes smaller ones

One big payment becomes part-by-part.

Business impact

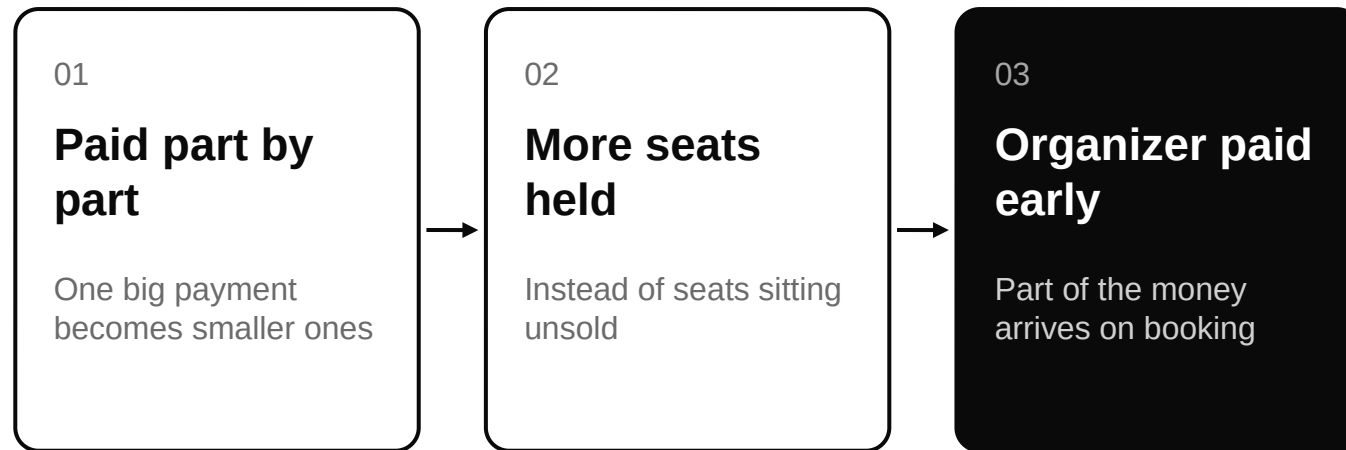

Expected chain · step 2 of 5

More seats get held, instead of sitting unsold.

Business impact

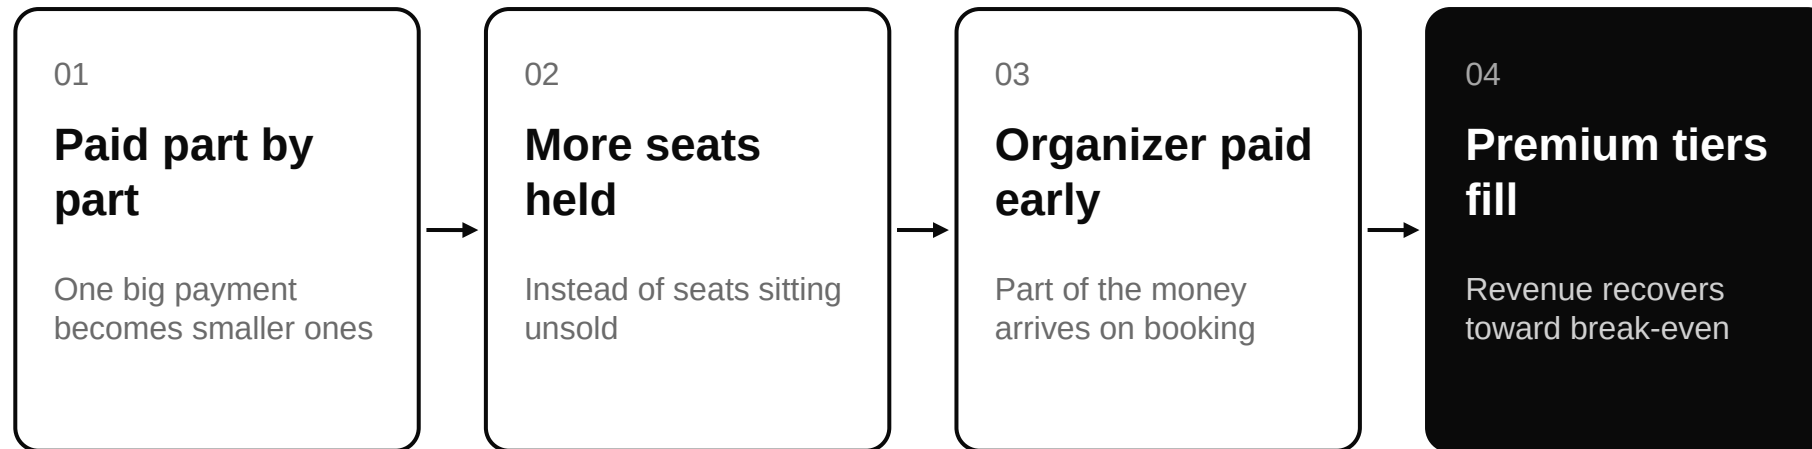

Expected chain · step 3 of 5

The organizer gets part of the money early.

Business impact

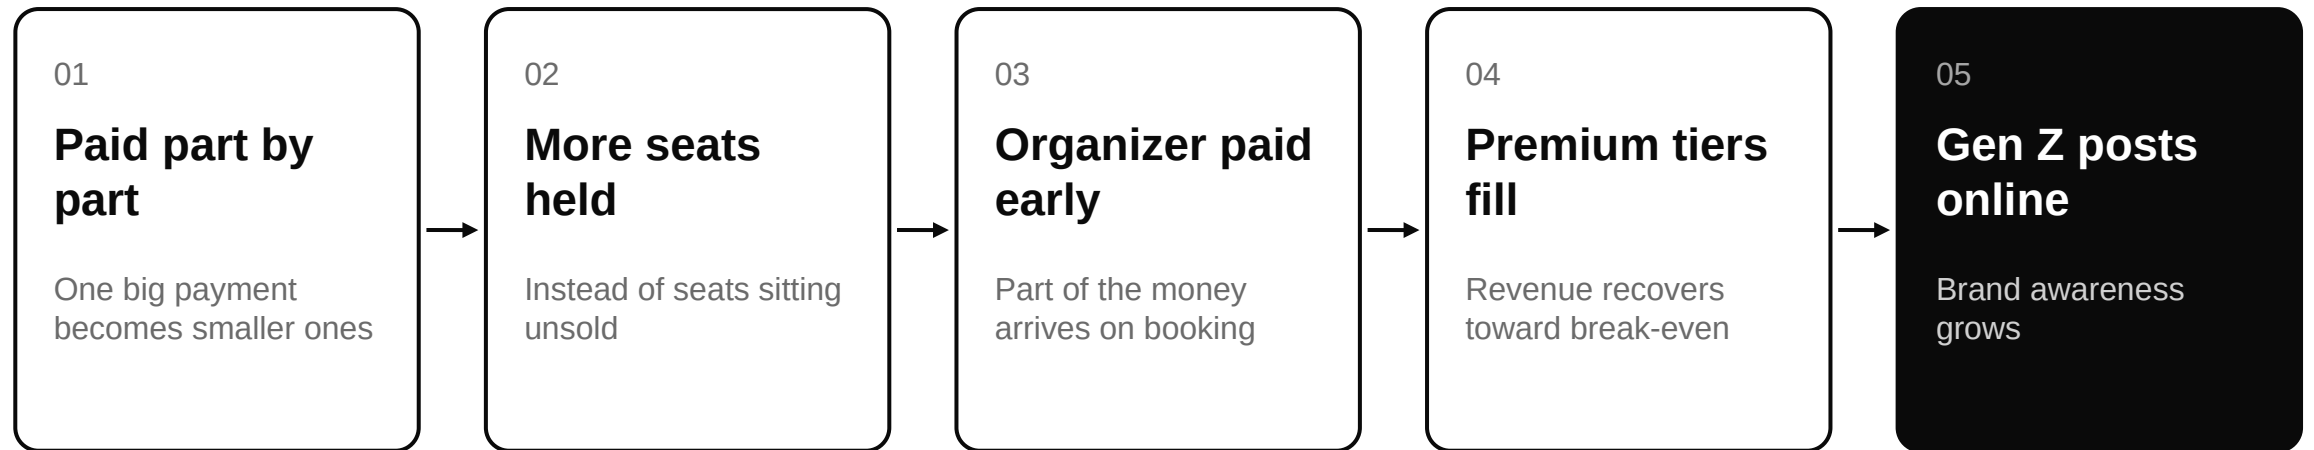

Expected chain · step 4 of 5

Premium tiers fill. Revenue recovers, closer to break-even.

Business impact

Expected chain · step 5 of 5

Gen Z posts about the concert. The brand gets noticed.

Measured so far: 3-4% adoption rate.

Learnings

01 Ask leadership more questions

Even when a competitor already has it. Do not just execute what comes down.

02 Plan for engineering time

Do not cut the flow just to save time. It causes problems later.

Thank you
